Observation Problem: In what ways does mastery of phonics affect the success of pupils in learning to read? 1. How far would you justify the proportions of the lesson as between instruction and training or drill? 2. Describe the method or methods employed in presenting elementary sound symbols? 3. How are pupils taught correct utterance of elementary sounds? 4. To what extent do you observe training in euphony and precision of pronunciation of complete words? 5. Give instances of analysis of words into their sound elements or synthesis of the spoken word. What relation does this seem to bear to correct speech? 6. Note instances of halting reading and try to determine whether the cause lies in slow recognition of word symbols or lack of motor control in utterance. (See Huey, --Psychology and Pedagogy of Reading, 348-353.) 7. What devices are employed to give zest to the drill? Variety? 8. Give instances showing how mastery of phonics aids toward independence...
