Excerpt: .war; and in relating, during an interview with Napoleon, at St. Helena, his experiences of travel, startled that great soldier with GOVERNMENT.-209 this unique characteristic of the Lew Chewans, which drew from him, as he shrugged his shoulders, the remark, No wars; it is impossible! Hall s state-ment would seem to be confirmed by the apparent absence of all arms or ammunition, or even the rudest weapons of attack or defence, such as bows and arrows. The ruins of fortresses and the walled dofences of Sheudi, however, seem to indicate that the island has not always enjoyed this blessed condition of peace, and the Japanese histories record the fact of ancient intestine and foreign wars. The government of Lew Chew seems to be an absolute despotism, with a system of administration like that of Japan, to which the island is tributary. The present...
