The external length of the chapel is 82 ft, the width 27, the largest ecclesiastical structure, therefore, in Kintyre, and probably also in the whole of Argyle, if the cathedral at Iona alone be excepted. The details though plain, as usual, are of very good character, and seem to be of advanced FirstPointed date. There is a plain pointed doorway on the south-west, another on the north-west, and a south-east one to the chancel--which although sufficiently defined by the disposition of the windows, and c, is not distinguished in the architecture. All the windows have the scoinson-arch, and with the doorways are formed of a bright red sandstone, which has rather a pleasing effect, but contrasts oddly with the dark slaty material of the general building. The east window is of two lights Bimply divided by a monial: those in the side...
